Research

Irwin, K.C. (in progress). Analyzing listening responses to Randy Newman's 1977 controversial song "Short People" amidst modern call-out culture [Editing manuscript for journal submission].

Irwin, K.C. (in progress). Collected 265 responses from an experimental online survey conducted at AUM about listening reactions to controversial popular music. Songs used for analysis include: "Short People" by Randy Newman (1977); "Baby, It's Cold Outside" by Frank Loesser (1944), and "m.A.A.d. City" (2012) by Kendrick Lamar.

Irwin, KC (in progress). Lost interviews from small-town Texas radio: Glen Alyn's redemptive stories of blues songster Mance Lipscomb [Editing manuscript for journal submission].

Irwin, K.C. (in progress). In July 2021 I interviewed Chris Strachwitz, founder of Arhoolie

Records about Texas Songster Mance Lipscomb and Alabama Blues singer Big Mama Thornton. In the summer of 1996 I interviewed (for a radio community show) Glen Alyn, author of Lipscomb's autobiography I Say Me For a Parable. I am researching these Black vernacular blues musicians of the mid-twentieth century who, in my opinion, were marginalized by radio broadcasting while white blues and rock artists emulated the vernacular blues into popular music and became more financially successful [Editing audio and adding an interview with John Leopold with the Arhoolie Foundation].
