ACADEMIC EMPLOYMENT

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF COMPOSITION. Department of English & Philosophy, Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. Aug. 2022-Current.

- Manage training and curricular plans, including designing professional development training sessions for new and returning writing instructors.
- Assists with design, collection, and analysis of data for annual program assessment.
- Mentors new and returning adjunct and GTA instructors for writing courses.
- Researcher and co-author of executive white paper calling for adoption of co-curricular composition course, English C1010 and C1011. Proposal approved and successfully implemented in Summer 2023, bringing our curriculum into alignment with current theory and practices of the field.
- Task force committee member for curriculum and learning outcomes redesign for both the First-Year Writing and the Department of English & Philosophy programs.

DISTINGUISHED SENIOR LECTURER. Composition Faculty, Department of English & Philosophy, Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. Aug. 2010-Present.

- Graduate teaching status.
- Lead instructor for both first-year and upper-division writing courses, with a 4/4 course load of both in-person and online courses.
- Onsite lead instructor and liaison to high school dual enrollment English composition program.
- Co-editor and contributing writer for in-house program textbooks, editions 2012-2018. Position required frequent collaboration with publisher, other writers, and editing team to ensure quality and on-time delivery.
- Online Educational Textbook Design Team member (2018-2021): Open Educational Textbook project funded by a grant from the Alabama Commission on Higher Education. Results shared as open-source publication and is currently undergoing revision.
- Certified in Online Teaching from University Faculty Development Institute.

LECTURER, HONORS PROGRAM. Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. 2021-2024.

- Designs and delivers curriculum for first-year Honors Program students in compliance with the standards and guidelines of the University Honors Program.

- With the approval of the Honors Program Director, initiated a redesign of the Honors first-year seminar course (HONRS 1757) to create content that better aligned with University-level writing outcomes as well as the core goals and outcomes of the Honors Program: Creative Thinking, Critical Thinking, Teamwork and Leadership, and Global Citizenship.
- This redesign incorporated multimodal content and rhetorically enhanced assignments for the first time in order to provide students with more diverse opportunities to develop critical habits of mind suited to Honors-level coursework.
- Original assignment design became the basis of an article developed for and published in 2022 Honors In Practice, the journal of the National Collegiate Honors Council.

VISITING PROFESSOR / GRADUATE WRITING CENTER COACH. THE CENTER FOR WRITING EXCELLENCE, GRADUATE WRITING CENTER, DEPARTMENT OF LEADERSHIP AND WAR FIGHTING. Maxwell AFB Air War College / Department of English & Philosophy, Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. 2011-2016.

- Contract Writing Coach for 200+ professional, graduate-level students.
- The Center for Writing Excellence assists students and faculty at the Air War College (AWC) to improve student and faculty writing. Prior to its opening, worked collaboratively with cotutor and AWC staff to build on existing Writing Center Theory and Research to design best practices and administrative procedures to meet the needs of the college and its faculty / student population.
- Applied professional tutoring theory and best practices based on Writing Center Theory and adult-learning theory, professional writing scholarship, and other theoretical frameworks adapted to meet the research and writing needs of professional military graduate students.
- Mission also included presentations to faculty and staff to provide operational and theoretical overview of the Center's mission and practices.
- Collaborated with AWC Assessment Team to devise appropriate tools (survey and interview questions) for gathering qualitative and quantitative data for future operations and research.

ASSISTANT TO DIRECTOR OF COMPOSITION (INTERNSHIP). Department of English & Philosophy, Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. Spring 2009.

- Research and Design Assistant for Composition Program and Composition Instructor Handbook Project.
- Assembled and designed content and layout for online resource / training site for composition instructors, including handbook materials, professional development readings, webliography, and links to WAC- and composition-related resource sites.

- Assisted with development and delivery of pilot-year WAC English composition courses, including participation as pilot instructor for composition and a portfolio reader for end-of-term program assessment.
- Assisted Director with instructor training sessions as part of pilot-year WAC English composition program. Sessions included orientation to Turnitin.com, Blackboard, application of revised course content, online writing tools, and related pedagogical issues specific to freshman English.

WRITING CENTER ASSISTANT / OWL DESIGNER. Auburn University at Montgomery, AL. 2003-2004.

- Designed and implemented premiere online web components for University's Writing Center using WebCT platform.
- Created, published, and maintained reference materials for clients of Center, including tips on all phases of the Writing Process.
- Designed and posted materials for online tutor training class for Writing Center. Material included discussion forum and prompts, bulletin board space for tutor exchanges, as well as tutorials for new staff members.
- Consultant to Writing Center Director regarding online theory and practical application of OWL technology / theory.

ONLINE ADJUNCT INSTRUCTOR OF ENGLISH COMPOSITION. Kaplan College Online. 2003-2004.

- Instructor of Composition I and II in a distance-learning environment. Online student population of non-traditional students pursuing two- and four-year degrees.
- Applied both asynchronous and synchronous technologies during ten-week semester courses conducted entirely online. Lesson plans designed to maximize directed self-learning and investigative techniques for expository and research essay writing.

ENGLISH WRITING CENTER ASSISTANT COORDINATOR. Auburn University, Auburn, AL. 2001-2003.

- Co-planned and directed weekly professional development sessions for new consultants/tutors. Collected and explored statistical data application on tutoring experiences and techniques during University English Writing Center Director's research project meetings.
- Assisted clients with establishing, prioritizing, and working through goals using the Process Model of writing. Sessions prioritized the use of Socratic questioning and modeling to give students the necessary strategies for future success in writing and critical reading, as well as to complement their classroom writing experience.

GRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANT. Department of English, Auburn University, Auburn, AL. 2001-2003.

- Co-taught Freshman Composition I and II for two semesters, followed by independent curriculum design and classroom instruction of Core Composition Courses.
- Course material focused on expository writing, introduction to literature and literary analysis, compositional writing and revision skills, and academic research.
- Intensive theoretical and hands-on training in the form of a weekly practicum and tutoring as a Graduate Writing Consultant in the English Writing Center.
- Combined traditional pedagogical techniques with technology in the writing classroom (email, online peer review, WebCT), incorporating innovative and creative application of instructional lab tools as well as Internet to enhance instructional effectiveness.

ADJUNCT INSTRUCTOR. Lake Region State College, Education Center, Grand Forks AFB, ND. 1996-2000.

- Independently designed curriculum and taught core freshman writing courses designed for adult students pursuing their two- or four-year undergraduate degrees.
- As many students were active-duty military members, distance education technology was used to facilitate their schedules and project delivery.
- Class material included introduction to literature and literary analysis, compositional writing skills, and construction of an academic research paper.
